Dear Jim,

I'd like to introduce you to my colleague, Caroline Boulton (cc'd on this email), who will be coordinating the Secretary's trip and will be your main point of contact. She'll follow up with you directly regarding the timing of his remarks and assistance with hotel reservations.

I'm cc'ing our Communications Director, Laura Rigas, who can answer your questions regarding the press release.

Thank you again for the opportunity to be part of your conference. The Secretary is looking forward to the event.

Best regards,
Leila

Leila,

We're thrilled that Secretary Zinke will have a keynote speaking slot on our program. I have him slated for the dinner keynote, at about 8 p.m. ET on Thursday, November 9. I presume that will be OK? And will Secretary Zinke need us to reserve a room for him and key staff at the hotel? We'd be happy to handle that, if necessary – that is, unless the secretary is returning to Washington or traveling to another locale after his speech.

I'd also like to issue a press release next week announcing Secretary Zinke's speech at the America First Energy Conference. Would the secretary like a statement from him included? And I presume we can also put the secretary's photo and bio on the website for the conference?

Thank you for your email, Mr. Palmer. I apologize for my delay and appreciate your patience. The Secretary appreciates your kind invitation and would be delighted to speak at your conference on November 9th in Houston. Thank you for thinking of him. Do you need anything else from me at this time to confirm his participation? Thank you again!

The America First Energy Plan contemplates using all of our federal fossil fuel resources. Secretary Zinke is at the helm on this issue for access to federal coal, oil and natural gas. His involvement in the Conference will help the American people and the energy community understand where we are going, energize us all, and help the President and Secretary advance this crucial program and agenda. Thank you.

Greetings,

I am writing with a special request. The Heartland Institute would be honored if Secretary Zinke would accept a keynote speaking slot at our America First Energy Conference<<http://americafirstenergy.org/>> in Houston, Texas on Thursday, November 9, 2017.

The conference's purpose, as the name suggests, is to promote the Trump administration's excellent agenda on that topic – one that abandons the dead-end “green energy” push of the Obama years. Especially because the president wants to make America a global power again in energy production, we selected the hub of our energy sector in Houston as the conference city.

We expect an audience of several hundred energy industry leaders at Houston's J.W. Marriott Galleria – as well as a healthy contingent of media – and we've reserved one of our three plenary keynotes for Secretary Zinke: 8 a.m, noon, or 7 p.m. (NOTE: If Thursday, November 9 is not ideal for the secretary's schedule, Heartland is also hosting an “Emerging Issues Forum” for more than 100 key state legislators at the same location the day before. Secretary Zinke could give a keynote dinner address to that audience, instead.)

I'd be happy to share our very rough draft of the American First Energy Conference schedule with you. The website we've created for our conference is AmericaFirstEnergy.org<<http://americafirstenergy.org/>>. It contains the broadest of outlines of our plans, and gives an indication of how it will be promoted.

We hope Secretary Zinke has room on his schedule for this event, and look forward to hearing back. Please feel free to contact me at any time on my cell (312-731-9364) or via a reply to this email with any questions.
